In 1887 he joined the distinctions which a foreign government has to heatow are less accessible by Englishmen than by any other nationals. Writing upon this subj-ot nearly a year ago, we said that, though official permission must be sought and obtained before one of Her Majesty's subjects may publicly accept and wear a foreign order, such permission, in the case of civilians at all events, can be propured without any difficulty; and that under the droumstances, the comparative exclusion of Englishmen from these distinctions in Japan was calculated to convey an impression certainly at variance with the sentiments of the Japanese Government. Since then, six British subjects have been decorated, viz., the three gentlemen mentioned above, and Mr. W. H Stone, of the Telegraph Department; Mr. A. S

Aldrich, of the Railway Department; and Mr. P

Osborn, of the Kanagawa Kencho. A story is told of a foreign Representative in Japan whose relations with the Government of the country were occasionally of a somewhat stormy nature. Fifteen or sixteen years ago there occurred an event which ecriously disturbed this official's equanimity, and while he was under the early influence of the shock, he was waited on by half-n-dozen Japanese officers, who solicited his aid towards obtaining instruction in a particular branch of military spience. Their answer was an angry recommendation to learn manner first and tactios efterwards -advice which parplexed them not a little, seeing that they were entirely without knowledge of the incident which prompted this outbreak. Nor was their ignorance wonderful, seeing that the thing had happened ten miles away and that the actors were men of a different clan. Another instance of vicarious misfortune is reported of the Datch authorities, who recently applied to the Government of Japan for permission to employ Japaness coolie labour in the West Indies. The answer they received was, "Treaty revision first and coolie labour afterwards," and this, we believe, brought the negotiations to a stand. coolies that treaty revision, a matter of which their ignorance must be tolerably profound, should be used as a barrier to their obtaining lucrative employment. But their case is no worse than was that of the Samurai who were debarred from studying the manual and platoon exercise because an Englishman riding on the Tokaido had been obliged to subscribe to Jatrust that the sequel of the application for coolies is not to be taken as an index of Japan's and that in Japanese courts as substantial just not very much in the country he would care to future policy. To Illustrate the vast scope of the work, the allowing facts are submitted for consideration :-Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,00 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult lauguages absolutely requires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hitherto pub-
